SHIPPING BILL OPPOSED

Representative Green Threatens to Hold Up Plan of Early Adjustment by Objections.

Just when it appeared that the Senate by disposing of the immigration bill, had smoothed the path for adjournment within two weeks, Representative Greene, of Massachusetts, interposed an objection to the consideration of the shipping bill in the House yesterday and announced if it were pressed he would make the point of "no quorum."

Chairman Alexander, of the House Committee on Merchant Marine, had moved that the bill be taken up and the Senate amendments agreed to, when the Massachusetts leader entered his objection.

The objection comes at a time when it is certain there is not a quorum of the House in the city, a great majority of the members being in their districts campaigning for re-election. If Representative Greene refuses to yield on the matter it may mean a prolonged filibuster or a call to the missing Democratic members of the House to come back to the Capitol and push the $50,000,000 administration measure through to enactment.

WILL RENAME DOGFISH

Bureau of Fisheries Believes Change to Grayfish Will Popularize the Species.

By changing the name of dogfish to that of grayfish the Bureau of Fisheries hopes to make this fish popular commercially.

It is hoped that representatives of the bureau who are in New England will be able to convince people who have been prejudiced by the former name that the fish has food value, and that the eggs, liver and skin and other parts of the fish can be used industrially.

A limited market for the fish as food has already been found in New York, and the salted fish is used as a crab bait in the fisheries on Chesapeake Bay. The development of the fish industrially will be accomplished gradually by the bureau.

HENRY FORD SUED BY VITAGRAPH COMPANY

Complaint Alleges That Automobile Manufacturer Published Article Injuring Reputation of Company.

New York, Aug. 22.—Formal service has been made upon Henry Ford, automobile manufacturer and millionaire peace advocate, in a suit for $1,000,000 brought by the Vitagraph Company of America for disparaging remarks about one of its recent releases.

The complaint, which is dated June 28, 1916, cites that on May 5, 1916, Ford caused to be published in some 250 newspapers throughout the United States an article entitled "Humanity and Sanity," in which article he charged in substance that the sentiment for preparedness was not genuine, but was due to the efforts of munition manufacturers to promote their selfish interests.

Ford further stated that "The Battle Cry of Peace," one of the Vitagraph pictures manufactured and produced at a cost of $250,000, more or less, was inspired by one Hudson Maxim, a manufacturer of munitions of war, in the interest of munition manufacturers, for the personal and selfish gain of said Maxim and others interested with him in the manufacture and sale of munitions.

The complaint then alleges that it was the purpose of the defendant to convey the impression that it is part of this conspiracy to deceive the public as to the necessity for preparedness. The allegation then is made that the defendant's article published by the defendant has, to a great extent, injured the reputation of and the plaintiff's business.

SHOE FACTORIES HIT BY LEATHER SHORTAGE

Many Northern Plants May Be Forced to Close Owing to Lack of Supplies.

There is an acute shortage in the leather supply for shoes, and a number of northern shoe factories may have to shut down this fall, not on account of lack of orders from retailers, but on account of not being able to get leather.

This information has been furnished by the manufacturers of one of their most popular lines of trade mark women's shoes.

This firm stated that it had been cutting 10% off its prices for the last three months, but that within ten days it probably would reach the end of the supply. It had leather quoted at 32 cents, could not be obtained a few days later, because it had been sent to Switzerland at 36 cents a foot.

An attempt is being made to have styles favor the use of low shoes and oxford's next spring, in order that the least amount of leather may be used. This will do away with the necessity of using leather substitutes, although it is probably that many, such as cloth, will be used in uppers. Low shoes and leather substitutes will not lower the cost of shoes per pair, but it will make the supply last longer.

SPEAKER CLARK GRANTS PRINTING PRIVILEGES

Leave to Print "Extended Remarks" Will Swell Government Bill—Campaign Speeches Prominent.

For half an hour yesterday the House did nothing but add to the government printing bill, and the sum total is expected to be well toward $50,000.

Democrats and Republicans alike joined in the "leave to extend remarks" requests, and since unanimous consent was given in every case, the volume of words that is scheduled to pour into the Government Printing Office as the result of yesterday's deliberations in the lower branch would be a record breaker were it all printed in one issue.

Under the rules, a Representative may take his own time in which to prepare his extended remarks for publication. He can inject all the "loud applause," "great applause" and "extended applause" items at convenient points in his remarks and nothing to show the crossroads voters back home that the speech has not met with genuine enthusiasm on the floor of the House, even though it was never actually delivered.

Speaker Clark occupied the chair and put the requests for extensions made by members. From all sides they came with a regularity that indicated some agreement had been reached to dispose of the great majority yesterday.

Congress has recognized the increased cost of paper by the introduction of several resolutions and bills designed to reduce the cost of print paper and products that enter into its manufacture. Congress, however, is not particularly concerned when Uncle Sam pays the bills or there is no indication of it in the manner in which the present session has piled up bills for printing.

Most of the speeches given leave to print yesterday will be used later for political purposes. They will be printed first in the Congressional Record and members are allowed a nominal number free of charge. After that they may purchase as many copies of the speech at actual cost as desired.

All of the speeches will not be printed together in one issue, since they would make a volume so large it would completely swamp the government office with its vast facilities.
